A Murder Mystery

by

Norman Robbins

Directed by Kathy Matthews

Romney Marsh, an aging horror star, is getting ready to begin a new play, and he has invited fellow cast members to his home for a read-through. Once his guests arrive, however, things start to go awry. The visitors find themselves trapped in a house that was built to look like the set of one of Romney's films, surrounded by guard dogs and a moat full of piranhas. Worst of all, there's a killer among them.

CAST

(in order of appearance)

Douglas Decker                      Patrick McDonough
"Who pulled the stake out of your heart?"

Edith Cartwright                      Trisha Chan
"But...but that means you think he was murdered"

Caroline Clavers                      Deborah Craddock
"I don't want to be left standing there like a spare part."

Bradford Kyle                      David Westcott-Walker
"I know , darling. You did cabaret at The Last Supper didn't you?"

Freddy Bostock                      Alistair Dobb
"Hadn't someone better call the police?"

Lynda Molloy                      Lorraine Andrew
"You can't accuse an innocent man of murder - even if he is dead."

Tanya Mason                      Jane Murray
"No need to stand, precious. Just treat me like you would any other international star"

Harriet Bales                      Avril McCormick
"Oh, that poor woman. If she hadn't come here , she'd still be alive."

Stella Bakewell                      Kate Purdue
"You mean.....you know who the murderer is?"

Romney Marsh                      Richard Hichens
"When I want your opinion, Edith, I'll give it to you"
